Foreign Students in U. S.

There were 4222 foreign students in attendance at colleges and universities in the United States in the year 1913, according to figures just compiled at the United States bureau of education. This is an increase of 577 in two years. These students are not concentrated at the larger and better known institutions, as might be expected, but are distributed over 275 difference colleges, universities, and schools of technology. The number given includes only regular students of college or preparatory departments, short-term courses, summer schools, and independent professional schools were included, the total would be very much larger.

Canada has the largest representation—835 students are from the dominion. China and Japan are not far behind—there were 594 Chinese students and 336 from Japan attending colleges in the United States in 1913. Of the other Oriental or Asiatic peoples, India is represented by 162 students; Turkey by 143; Korea by 13; Persia by 21, and Siam by 13.

Latin-America is strongly represented. Cuba sends 209; Costa Rica, 29; Guatemala, 15; Honduras, 12; Nicaragua, 18; Panama, 28, and Salvador 19.

HOW TUNES ARE BUILT

The mastery of music never just "came naturally" to any human being. The world has never known a more industrious worker than the illustrious Franz Schubert. Yet, if to anyone in the world music "came naturally" it seemed to come so to him. When the school principle asked his harmony teacher how young Franz Schubert was progressing, the teacher said: "He is a wonder. Whenever I explain anything new to him, he always seems already to know it. He must have received his knowledge straight from heaven." Yet, in spite of such superb gifts, there was never a harder worker than he. And don't you think that we, with our lesser gifts, should follow his example? If he with all his heaven-sent genius could not succeed without strenuous daily labor, how can we hope to accomplish anything worth while without ceaseless, patient and conscientious toil?—Woman's World.

They had just become engaged. "What joy it will be," she exclaimed, "for me to share all your griefs and sorrows!"

"But, darling," he protested, "I have none."

"No," she answered, "but when we are married you will have."

WALTER JOHNSON'S SLUMP EXPLAINED BY MATHEWSON

BY CHRISTY MATHEWSON.

Among this season's unexpected reversals of form—and there have been many—is that of Walter Johnson, the great Washington pitcher. Understand, I do not pretend to say that Johnson is pitching poorly even now, but his record shows that he has already lost more games this season than he did all last year. He may have got some tough breaks and poor support, as he has. He also has dropped several contests in succession, an almost unheard of thing for the Washington wonder up to this time. What is the cause of this slump?

Much inside gossip floats around both big leagues when ball players get together, and certain information has reached me which seems to explain the comparatively poor showing Johnson has made recently. I do not care to divulge my source of information, since it might lay him open to some criticism, as he is close to the Washington club.

Speed Johnson's Asset.

Ever since Johnson started to pitch in the big leagues his great ability has been due to his wonderful speed, and up to this year he had depended almost entirely on a fast ball when in the box. Batters naturally knew that Johnson was going to use a fast one when they faced him, but even realizing what was coming did them little good before that terrific speed of his.

As I got the story, Clarke Griffith contracted the notion early last spring that Walter was wearing out his arm by using so much speed constantly, and that he could fool the batters this year by pitching curves and thus save his wing. Therefore Griffith directed Johnson to cross the hitters by using his curve ball regularly and depending on his fast one only on occasions. It used to be the other way around. Johnson would use his fast one right through and only throw up a curve once in a while to cross the hitter if he seemed to be up there set for a fast one. But Griffith is a great theorist when it comes to pitchers.

I have had several American leaguers who have faced Walter this year tell me that he is losing his speed, even when he tries to shoot that fast one across in pitches.

"He hasn't got the old jump ball now," declared an American leaguer to me recently. "He may get it back, but he has been curve-balling himself to death all year. I never saw him use so many curves in a season before as he did in one game against us. It was curve after curve."

Changed Form Hurts Arm.
Many a pitcher who has tried to change his form has hurt his efficiency very materially by it, and I believe this is what Johnson will do if he continues to throw curves. To my mind it is a bigger strain on the wrist and arm to use a curve than the fast one, because you've got to keep giving that wrist the old twist each time, and the constant use of the curve ball reduces a man's speed. A man is generally either a natural curve ball pitcher or a fast ball pitcher, and Johnson is distinctly the latter. What if the batters did know when he was going to throw his fast one? They could not hit it. As "Germany" Schaefer said about Walter's speedy one: "You can't hit what you don't see."

"You can't hit what you don't see." And Walter used to work in his curve only just often enough to keep the batter from settling himself for the fast ball. Johnson is not old enough in the game yet to begin to lose his speed from plain wear and tear, and it would be time enough for him to take up steady curve ball pitching then. I believe he has made a mistake if he has been curving them constantly all year.

Dubuc Uses Slow Ball.

"Take a man like Dubuc of Detroit. He is a slow ball pitcher, one of the best in the business, from all that I hear. He developed that slow ball in the minors after he had had a chance with the Cincinnati Reds several seasons ago and had been sent back to the bushes. All batters knew that Dubuc is going to use that slow one, but he would be crazy to figure that he could cross them by switching to a steady diet of fast ones. In the first place, his fast ball would not be effective. Such a hitter as Frank Baker breaks his back on the slow ones. Suppose the batters did know Johnson was depending on speed almost entirely. They could not hit it, while they are evidently beating him on his curve ball pitching. Also, he is losing some prestige every time he drops a game now, because the batters are beginning to believe they can hit him, and he has not the Indian sten on the clubs he used to carry. Formerly Johnson could throw his glove into the box and his game would be practically won. The opposing manager would begin to figure out what pitcher he could best sacrifice against the big Washington right-hander. He had them all scored, which was the edge. He cannot afford to lose that old prestige."

When the spitball was all the craze after it was first discovered several good pitchers went to work to develop one, feeling that they would need it to last in the big leagues. The spitball is wearing on the arm, one of the hardest of all deliveries to throw, because of the peculiar way in which it must be floated up to the batter without any spin to the ball. Many good twirling hurlers arms attempting to switch and use it and spoiled their effectiveness with their other styles of delivery. I refused to try the spitball after I had pitched a few for fear it would injure my wing. Very seldom do I ever throw one in a game unless I use it once in a great while to surprise a hitter if I think I have him off his guard. I don't believe I have used three so far this season. Three or four years ago I used to shoot one at Hon
